Beige.

Down-to-earth and reassuring, a warm colour that creates harmony. Suitable for rooms dedicated to concentration and relaxation. It stands for simplicity and tranquility. A neutral and beautiful colour that flourishes in the company of other colours.

Mustard Yellow.

Stimulating, inspiring and playful. Sharpens our memory and thinking. It gets people to open up, the perfect choice for meeting rooms where creativity needs to flow. Like all warm colours, it feels welcoming.

Dusty Pink.

A colour of contrasts that elicits an emotional response. Masculine, feminine or a bit of both. Originally the colour of falling in love, it promises fidelity, happiness and optimism. Signals independence and courage.

Rusty Red.

A vibrant colour that conveys warmth and consideration. Influences creativity and spreads positive energy. Is exhilarating and vitalising, stands out and acts as an energiser in public spaces.

Burgundy Red.

An elegant and sophisticated colour. Invites reflection, and bestows a feeling of composure, maturity and wisdom. Can be perceived as dominant and powerful. Yet harmonious and inviting.

Blue Grey.

The colour draws inspiration from the vast oceans. Simultaneously providing confidence and reassuring. It is well-balanced, flexible and infinite. Many of us tend to become more productive in rooms with blue colour schemes.

Green.

Reminiscent of lush summer meadows. Has a calming effect and creates harmony. Gets noticed without being too obvious. The colour that is easiest on the eye.

Grey.

A neutral colour that combines harmoniously with most other colours. Both classic and modern, all depending on context. Can create a tranquil, feel-good atmosphere, as well as a back-to-basics attitude.

Dark Grey.

There is a reason why there are so many shades of grey. Less formal than black and has come to symbolise elegance. This dark version has a luxurious feel and spreads a congenial warmth.

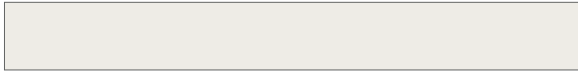

Black.

Black has an unparalleled ability to create a sense of drama. At the same time, it conveys an exclusive, premium feel. Is often used as an exciting contrast to add visual interest to the room. There is also something inherently reassuring about black.

White.

A warm white colour that generates a soft and relaxed atmosphere. White is often associated with purity and honesty. Can also give off a professional vibe and is sophisticated in its simplicity.
